

1202 CHILDREN IN SCHOOL IN WEST LIBERTY

A total of 1,202 children are enrolled in the two schools in West Liberty.

Morgan County High has an enrollment of 790 and West Liberty's new elementary school on Wells Hill has 412. The total is an increase of 142 over last year, Supt. Walton Jones said.

Grades 5 through 12 are enrolled in the MCHS building on Prestonsburg street. Grades 1 through 4 are enrolled in the new elementary school on Wells Hill.

The elementary school building was constructed by K. E. Clifton & Sons of Grayson. The firm has built school buildings at Isonville, Grayson, Winchester and other towns. This is a modern building and a credit to the school system.

Worst situation at the new school is the road leading to it from the bridge at U.S. 460 at the southern outskirts of West Liberty. The road has only a gravel surface and is narrow. Two cars can barely pass at some points.

Teachers in the new school and their room enrollment follows—

First Grade—Mrs. Wardie Craft enrolled 36; Mrs. Ann Blair, 36; Mrs. Beulah Gibson, 36.

Second Grade—Oshie Caskey enrolled 41; Malva Stacy, 45; and Mrs. Lucille Walter, 42.

Third Grade—Lena Haney enrolled 33; Mrs. Reva Henry, 34; and Mrs. Glenn Lacy, 39.

Fourth Grade—Mrs. Mabel Amyx enrolled 40; Mrs. Bernice Hegry, 41; and Mrs. Anos Conley, 40.

LETTERS FROM THAILAND

NOTE: Major Wm. E. Barber, Morgan's Congressional Medal of Honor winner, and his family have been residing in Thailand (pronounced Tie-land) for some time now and writing "family" letters to the Major's mother, Mrs. Mabel Barber of West Liberty, who in turn passes the letters to the others in the family. The Major, who is in the Marine Corps and serves in the office of the Naval Attache, American Embassy, lets his wife, Ione, do most of the writing. The Courier plans to publish excerpts of her letters from time to time, as they are interesting, well-written and give an account of activities in Thailand. The first letter we are using was written in the Spring—

Bangkok, Thailand

March has been quite an endurance test. The main reason for so much activity is that many of our friends are leaving for the states. Much as I hate to see some of them leave, I am looking forward to them getting aboard the plane so we can get some much needed rest from all the farewell parties.

We spent a wonderful 3-day week end relaxing at the beach in Sattahip (back in January). We drove down in two cars. Bill and Al (the Shiptead family also went along) decided to drive the Attache cars to save wear and tear on their own—but we were a curious procession. The Navy car is a very old Chevrolet with the rear springs worn out—those in the new Army Ford were getting their heads beat against the top because the springs were too good. Our Marine friend,

Farmers All Over County Signing For Bang's Testing Of Their Herds

Since livestock products account for sixty cents of every farm dollar earned, animal diseases are a major headache to American farmers. Although the United States Department of Agriculture believes much of the loss can be prevented by better use of the means now available, Germs that cause scours, pneumonia and other diseases of pigs and calves, for example, can be snuffed out with the powerful antibiotic, Terramycin. The same drug clears up cattle Mastitis (a $200 million dollar problem), as well as open-mouth infections common in barnyard populations. Added to drinking water, the antibiotic wards off diseases, helps reduce chick mortality, and laying slumps, and thus prevent severe economic losses. The Department of Agriculture adds, "Much more can be prevented by further research."

Brucellosis (or Bang's disease) of beef and dairy cattle is the most serious economic loss in both beef and dairy cattle. It is extremely important that this disease be eradicated and prevented as there is no sure cure for this disease.

Bang's disease is a danger to human health as it causes the dread disease Undulant Fever in humans, which is carried by cattle through the meat and milk or by handling cattle who have or are carriers of the disease.

The disease can only be controlled by blood testing of cattle and vaccination of all heifers from four through eight months of age.

Tommy Oldfield, livestock farmer and Secretary of the Livestock Association, said this week that through personal contacts with livestock farmers in thirty communities in the county and through phone calls to livestock farmers in other communities of the county, the cattle testing and vaccination program will be requested by seventy-five percent of cattle owners of the county owning eighty percent of the cattle in the county.

He urges all livestock owners and all citizens of the county to get behind this program and to be on the first sign-up. Petitions are already coming in from several communities and some community workers report a one hundred percent sign-up of cattle owners for this free service. Mr. Oldfield urges leaders in every community to get behind this program and to contact cattle owners and explain this free program to them. "It is for our own good," he said.

Morgan county, known as the "Bluegrass County of the Mountains," can get rid of this serious disease which can go through a cattle herd, and can spread to other herds in the county and can cause human suffering and loss of time and money by the possibility of Undulant Fever from infected cattle. "Good cattle" are only good, if they are healthy and free from diseased or carrier cattle. Plan now to get rid of this contagious cattle disease. It will save you money.

What advantages does a certified Bang's Free county bring to the herd owners in the county?

1. Protects individual farmers' herds from exposure to Brucellosis.
2. Helps farmers meet the demands of their milk markets.
3. Helps eliminate the danger of human Brucellosis (undulant fever).
4. Adds to the value of all herds for breeding purposes.
5. Increases the value of cattle offered for sale.
6. Helps farmers maintain disease-free herds.
7. Makes the business of livestock farming more profitable and less-hazardous.
8. Facilitates the movement of cattle intrastate and interstate.

4-Year-Old Child Has Heart-Artery Surgery

Martha Jo Hume, four-year-old granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Rowland, Twenty-six, apparently is recovering nicely after a delicate heart and artery operation in Children's Hospital in Cincinnati last Thursday.

Martha Jo was a blue baby, and had never been physically strong due to a lack of oxygen. Surgeons took an artery from Martha Jo's shoulder and arm and grafted it from the heart to the lung so that more blood vitalized by oxygen from the lungs would reach her capillaries and thus strengthen her body. The child was able to spend two hours in a wheel chair Labor Day and enjoy a glass of chocolate milk.

Martha Jo is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Hume of Lexington.

EAST KY. SCENIC AREA FOR PUBLIC, KIWANISANS TOLD

"We are sitting right in the midst of one of the most scenic recreational areas in the Eastern United States," Seymour Hile, assistant superintendent of the Cumberland National Forest, told the West Liberty Kiwanis Club at its meeting Wednesday.

Hile came here from Winchester to talk of the possibilities of recreational development in Eastern Kentucky. He was introduced by Harold Barber, biologist for the State Wildlife Commission.

Forest and Water resources are tied together and offer possibilities for development of recreational areas, wildlife propagation and introduction of industries using timber, Hile said.

After 20 years of forest management, Cumberland National Forest is now producing 24 million board feet of lumber per year. And timber resources are increasing 183 board feet per acre per year on the 257,000 acres in the forest. The forest includes areas in 27 Eastern Kentucky counties.

Also, within the region cooperating agencies have set up four game management areas—one for deer, one for grouse, one for turkeys and one for quail. And the first open season for deer hunting was last year.

"We protect the entire area against forest fires," Hile told the club.

"Right here we have one of the outstanding scenic areas in the country. As an example, there are 26 small stone arches within 15 miles of Sky Bridge, and there are gorges you wouldn't see anywhere," Hile said.

He predicted this area of Eastern Kentucky would become one of the famous recreational areas of the nation within a few years, and urged Kiwanians to aid in development of recreational facilities.

COMET IS SEEN IN SKY
NEAR LEXINGTON

Reports of a comet in the western sky, about 10 degrees above the horizon, were verified recently by Prof. H. H. Downing, retired head of the department of mathematics and astronomy at the University of Kentucky.

Prof. Downing's verification of the comet was the first made by a professional astronomer. He confirmed it last week after sighting it through a small telescope at the University's observatory.

He said he assumed the comet might be a "stray" since the appearance of no visible comet had been expected on the basis of materials at hand.

The comet may be seen by the naked eye, with concentration, in the western sky with clear skies, but may be seen better with aids such as field glasses or a telescope.

AWAY TO SCHOOL

It's a milestone in your life—the day you send the first bird out of the nest, the day he goes away to college. Fortunately, he'll never know how much you're worrying and wondering how he'll get along.

Worry, of course, will get you nowhere. You won't be there to get him up in time to eat breakfast before his first class. You can't remind him to drink his milk or eat his vegetables or brush his teeth or get eight hours of sleep. In the first burst of freedom, he may break some of the rules of health you've helped him follow for years. Console yourself with the fact that it probably won't do a healthy boy permanent damage. Before long he'll return to the good health habits you have instilled.

For your own peace of mind, as well as for his health, be sure he gets a complete physical check-up before he leaves home. Some colleges will give him a physical after he reaches campus. Most will ask for a report from the family doctor, but they vary considerably in the amount of information required. It's up to you to see that the person has a head-to-toe examination, including a tuberculin test. You'll want to be sure that TB isn't hiding beneath that healthy summer tan.

As the parent of a college student, you'll want to know more about college health problems and programs. Your Kentucky Tuberculosis Association can get for you a copy of The College And Student Health. This little volume will help you understand what's needed to protect your son or daughter's health in the important years ahead.

DON'T TAKE YOURSELF TOO SERIOUSLY

Some folks are so busy defending their dignity against imaginary and real affronts that they have time for nothing else. An innocent remark, a harmless glance, a moment of thoughtlessness and they feel slighted? Are you one of these unfortunates? Make a determined resolution to change right now. Happiness you can never know when you let yourself wallow in a frame of mind that keeps you ever thinking that people are trying to offend and hurt you. Shake off that miserable feeling. People are not going out of their way to slight you. Change your tune. Instead of a frown, greet each imaginary insult with a smile. Your digestion will immediately improve.—Christian Home Messenger.

FARMER IS GOUGED AGAIN

News Week reports President Eisenhower as recently stating he blamed farm programs for a big part of the cost-of-living hike which has gone up each month for the past ten.

Prices farmers are receiving for their products is around 82 percent of parity now. If supports were boosted to 100 percent the cost of living would rise only 3 percent. Reason is the cost of most foods is just a fraction of what the consumer pays.

LUXURY TRAVEL

American motorists like luxury travel—and the powerful, high-compression cars they demand need high-octane, quality gasolines. According to one estimate, by 1958 it will take a fuel of about 95 octane to get top performance out of 90 percent of the cars on the road. And if present trends continue, high-performance cars may require 110-octane gasolines by 1960. This is an expensive proposition when you consider that it costs the oil industry about $100 million to increase the national average gasoline octane rating by just one point.

Only 38 years ago, it took twice as much crude oil to produce a gallon of gasoline as it does today.

Farmers spend as much for petroleum products as for farm machinery—almost two billion dollars a year.

Almost all of the nation's crude oil is found in rock formations that are more than 400 centuries old.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

LIKES JESSE STUART'S BOOK, OTHER KY FOLKLORE

The Courier—
I am writing for some information on where I can find the best seller "Taps For Private Tussie," by Jesse Stuart.

I am very fond of Mr. Stuart's writings but can't seem to find his work in our part of the country.

I have an old frizzled paged Reader's Digest with Mr. Stuart's "History Brought Home" in it; also an article about his grandfather, Nathan Hyton. This copy of the Digest was published Sept. 1945. It is one of my prize keepsakes, plus stuff I clip from the L.V.C. down through the years and of interest to only me, I guess. Another favorite writer of mine is Mrs. Alma Robinson Higbee whom I understand is in poor health at this time. I want to join all her friends and relatives in wishing her a speedy recovery and the best of luck in her writing. She is terrific, also.

I thought your feature article on the "House of A Forgotten Tragedy" was wonderful. I love old log houses and would love to see that one on Salem, if time permits me to do so.

Your state of Kentucky is my favorite. It like West Virginia and Virginia is so rich in historical events. Yet West Virginia and Virginia have to toss in their cards and admit Kentucky has had more true to life living than either of them, including more color and excitement. The sun seems more golden, the sky more blue and the rivers more lazy and calm. Here's to old Kentucky and all of you.

Sincerely,
Letha Gibson
Wharncliffe, West Virginia

Cincinnati Newsman Views Progress In Development Area

By Dave Hess

SANDY HOOK, Ky., Aug. 24—
"What Eastern Kentucky needs most is capital," said C. P. Esham, coordinator of the state's vocational education service with the rural development program, at a recent meeting in Lexington.

"But don't get the idea these mountain people are destitute," exclaimed Ellis Boggs, area extension agent for rural development, in his office at Morehead.

Both statements are true and came from men reared in the Eastern Kentucky Mountains.

Mountain folks make do with what they have. They're taught early in life, like an army recruit, to improvise. They have plenty to eat even though they have to raise it.

"There are people with relatively low incomes in every area of the nation but here we have many more in that category," continued Boggs. "We hope the long-range rural development program will eventually correct this situation."

It has been more than a year since residents of Elliott county became enthusiastic about the U. S. Department of Agriculture's rural development program and elected to become a pilot county.

Counties in the rural development trade area include Boyd, Carter, Greenup, Lawrence, Lewis, Magoffin, Martin, Morgan, Rowan, Wolfe, Johnson and Elliott.

The area is characterized by rough mountain terrain, small subsistence-type farms with some tillable land, surplus labor and limited opportunity in both agriculture and industry.

At the Morehead meeting, delegates from each of the counties heard leaders discuss principal problems of the trade area—unemployment and low productivity by human resources. Then they went back to their respective counties and set up committees on agriculture, industry, education and another to look into sociological problems.

"It would be difficult to list all the accomplishments of the rural development program in 12 counties," reported Boggs. "The program, which is simply a long-range plan to assist people to help themselves, is gaining momentum."

Except for a group of citizens in Salversville, county seat of Magoffin county, busily constructing a swimming pool for the youth of the area, there isn't any frenzied activity as a result of rural development.

Established government agencies, rural people and local organizations are working together in long-range planning to accomplish what they know has to be done.

"By bringing people from the various counties together to discuss problems, services for the entire area can be developed that otherwise would be prohibitive," explained Boggs.

But since Elliott is the pilot county in the area, as might be expected, this county is where the most progress, since rural development started, shows up.

County seat town is Sandy Hook, population 500. Elliott has a population of 6100. Population has declined 14 percent in the last seven years for an average of 2 percent a year.

Reason: Few or no job opportunities.

"Some day we might attract a small industry, if we get a water supply," said J. B. Lyon, chairman of the county's industrial committee. "We have plans to back waters up in Ruin Creek, a tributary of the Little Sandy."

Lyon realizes what is happening to the county's population. He operates a drift-mouth coal mine out in the county. The opening is sunk right in the side of the mountain.

Eight years ago he employed 60 men. Today, with new labor-saving equipment, he employs 16 and his output is increasing. This mine is the most sizeable operation in the county, but the same is true in larger mines of adjoining counties, where some of Elliott's citizens sought work.

Agent Boggs pointed out that the Lyon mine is a small operation, where full automation couldn't be applied. In the larger mines, percentage of layoffs may be even greater due to fuller utilization of automation.

Timber resources in the area are playing out. Much of that being harvested now is of low quality and immature. Size of logs is small.

Lyon pointed out the county still has oil, coal, clay and lime resources to attract industry.

"We are considering the establishment of a vegetable processing plant here in Sandy Hook and farmers could benefit by growing the produce," he exclaimed.

"We might encourage a brick or tile plant for we have several different type clays."

But at a regional rural development conference held in Louisville last May, one speaker pointed out industries are reluctant to settle in an area without adequate schools, hospitals, churches and recreation facilities. This is true even in areas where there is a tremendous source of labor to tap.

Dr. E. J. Nesius, of the University of Kentucky and chairman of the state rural development committee, pointed out the difficulty in supporting schools, churches and other facilities in areas with a dwindling population.

"Even if industry would consider such an area, supervisory employees wouldn't settle there," he said.

"It's a matter of remedying the small problems first," Boggs said. "So the rural development program works on the community level first."

Stark community in the county has made good progress.

"Stark community consists of 56 farm families living on an average-size farm of 130 acres each," explained Marion Mason, Soil Conservation Service technician for the county.

"In the entire community, cropland comprises 585 acres, about the size of a large Midwest farm unit."

Hay and pasture acreage is measured at 2340 acres and woodland covers 3575 acres.

One of the key men and a leader in Stark community is W. K. Leedy, veteran farmer of 140 acres—some almost straight up and down.

"The county seems to be picking up a little with this rural development program," he said.

"We've painted up the community church and mowed the weeds along the roadsides to start."

Most of the farmers in the community had their cattle tested for Bang's disease and eight classes in plumbing were held. As a result the Leedys have inside plumbing for the first time in their lives. Students learning by doing, installed the facility inside the Leedys' well painted farm home.

Curt Holbrook, farmer of 100 acres of mountain terrain, pointed to names on all the mail boxes in the area as result of rural development. Mrs. Holbrook attended adult classes in paper hanging and floor finishing. She has sand and doors in her neat, white cottage home.

Others are building espice tanks, beautifying yards with shrubs and flowers. "We've got to have clean attractive communities to attract industry to the area," explained one mountain resident. They realize the small problems must be solved first.

Fall Table Greens
Need Planting Now

Fall greens such as kale, spinach, mustard and turnips, should be planted now for green-vegetable availability during the late fall and early winter, says Claude Singletary, Kentucky Experiment Station horticulturist.

Greens so planted and properly cared for may be harvested up to the period of a severe freeze. A hardy plant such as kale may be harvested through the entire winter when the weather is not too severe.

Rainfall frequently is light during the late summer months so it may be necessary to irrigate the seedbeds frequently to obtain a good stand. Fall seeding may begin anytime and continue until Sept. 15 for the fast-maturing mustard and spinach, Singletary notes.

IN OL' MORGAN

Milton Hull, had arranged so many nice things for the children that they couldn't bear to miss a single minute of daylight. He had riding horses stabled by the cottage for each of them, and they were constantly torn with deciding whether it was more fun riding, swimming or motor boating.

By night, they were all exhausted, but Bill had brought several Western films along from the Embassy and they struggled hard to watch a full length feature before tumbling into bed.

Again we took two servants with us, so the mothers and dads did nothing but sleep late, eat, swim and play bridge.

March 22 we gave a farewell dinner for Col. Milton Hull, who was leaving for the states—60 invited guests. The Royal Thai Navy decorated our compound with colored lights, the likes of which I've never seen back home. They used a few neon lights, several hundred plain colored bulbs, together with clusters of lights and bells which were hung in the trees. Of course the electric current in our house could never carry such a load, so the Navy also provided a big generator. All this is a courtesy provided by the Thai Navy for a sizeable party to which we had invited some people are invited. We had a party set up on the lawn for which I had made tablecloths—half were of bright red with huge white coin dots, and the others black with white dots. Then, we had a miniature kerosene lamp setting on each table.

Bill put our record player on the upstairs balcony so we could have music drifting down with the soft night breezes—and we couldn't have hoped for a more beautiful evening. The mosquitoes here have been biting and off too because I noticed no one was using the skeeterone.

We served the food buffet style from the house.

The commissary stock was almost down to nothing—the ship was long overdue. I had two large hams and a 20 lb turkey in the deep freeze, but I needed another turkey and some staples. Guess we had been living right, because the ship arrived. We were also able to add celery and a bit of lettuce to the menu!

March 14, I gave a farewell luncheon for the departing Army Attache's wife. As is customary, I asked her to submit the guest list—limiting her to 20, but no undertaking is completely simple over here. My guest list included four members of royalty and several whose husbands are of such rank in the government that I had to consult the Embassy Protocol Officer for help in the proper seating of them.

Bill and Major Shipstead, the assistant Army Attache, made a 12-day trip to the south of Thailand and to Penang in Malaya. They chose a jeep-truck for transportation and took a Thai driver along mainly to act as interpreter. I am hoping Bill will have time to describe his trip to you later.

What he told me sounded very interesting.

THE BARBERS

Among those returning for the Homecoming last week were Mr. and Mrs. Drexel Moore of Anchorage, Alaska. They traveled by plane from Anchorage to Seattle, Washington and by train to Detroit.

One of the highspots of the homecoming program was the film which he had made for the government in Alaska.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore have lived in Alaska for twelve years. He is an engineer for the government and in reality has charge of the administrative work in engineering for all Southern Alaska. He travels extensively by plane in the work he does, and says that Alaska is a great country, 3,000 miles along the Pacific coast and under his supervision.

Before going to Alaska he was resident engineer at West Liberty, Louisiana and other places in Kentucky. He attended school at West Liberty and Louisville. His wife is the former Miss Louise Jones, daughter of a Paintsville undertaker. They have two children, Janalee and Jimmie. Both have married in Alaska and live there.

Drexel said when they first went to Anchorage it was a town of 4,000 people and now it is a modern city of 100,000 population with all the conveniences of a modern city in the United States.

He said the climate was very enjoyable, that during the summer the temperature ranges from 60 to 80 degrees and that during the winter months there is much rainfall. Prices of most manufactured items are very high because of the freight. He is very much in favor of the territory being admitted as a state. This he said, will be of much help. As it is, Alaskians do not vote and have very little to do in making their laws. All officials are appointed.

He said that the most important thing in Alaska is the salmon fishing which lasts only about 8 days, yet millions of dollars in salmon are caught. On the last recently had 13 million dollars in salmon, which are brought to the U. S. and canned.

Today Alaska is of tremendous importance as an outpost of defense for the United States. It was purchased for $5,200,000 and today is worth billions.

Party For Darlene Whitt, Ward of Guild, Marks Meeting At Brown Home

Members of the Margaret Stacy Guild entertained with a birthday party for Miss Darlene Whitt of Redwine at the September meeting of the Guild, which was held Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Russell Brown on Riverside Drive.

The meeting was opened with a program of devotions conducted by Mrs. James A. Norsworthy, after which Mrs. Lloyd Patterson presented the program. Mrs. Patterson emphasized the largeness or smallness of one's world and read from the book, "Christ And The Flint Arts," to add to her remarks. Her reading of a poem in which the writer wished to be more like Jesus and hedged in each day's trials with Christlike courage, was most impressive.

Mrs. Herbert Wells, president, had charge of the business meeting.

A joint meeting with the Women's Society of Christian Service will be held Oct. 3 in the form of a potluck supper at the home of Mrs. C. K. Stacy, with Mrs. Stacy, Mrs. Neil Hunley and Mrs. Henry L. Stacy as hostesses. Mrs. C. L. Cooper of Mt. Sterling will be guest speaker.

Darlene Whitt is a student at the Kentucky School for the Deaf at Danville and spends her summers at Redwine with her aunt, Mrs. Viola Whitt. Each year in September the Guild sponsors a birthday party for Darlene. She will be twelve years old on Sept. 13. Mrs. Viola Whitt cares for a total of twelve children at her home at Redwine—nine of her own and three belonging to her sister who died some time ago. When her sister passed away, Mrs. Whitt told her that she would take care of the three children.

Darlene has red hair, which she wears in a pony-tail, and grey-blue eyes that sparkled when she opened her many gifts which included five dresses, shoes, underclothes, toilet articles and some money. She is an attractive young lady and, even though she does not talk, her spoken "Thank you" warmed the hearts of all present.

Mrs. Carla Carpenter was welcomed as a new member of the Guild.

Mrs. Brown served pink lemonade and cookies to the following: Darlene Whitt, Mrs. Viola Whitt, Mrs. Carla Carpenter, Mrs. C. K. Stacy, Mrs. Herbert Wells, Pauline D. Blair, Mrs. Carlos Scott, Mrs. Henry L. Allen, Mrs. LaRue Peyton, Mrs. Charles Gullett, Mrs. A. P. Gullett, Mrs. J. S. Perry, Mrs. Lloyd Patterson, Mrs. Jerald Amyx, Mrs. Drexel West, Lu Scheiber, Mrs. H. B. Murray, Mrs. H. C. Howell, Mrs. James A. Norsworthy, Mrs. Major Gardner, Mrs. Woodrow Stamper, Mrs. Jack Scragg, Mrs. Stanley Gullett, Mrs. Henry L. Stacy.

The following were recent visitors in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carmey Chaney at Grassy Creek: Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Chaney and son of Middletown, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. M. Carter of Elkhart, Indiana; Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Ferguson and Earl Carter of Trenton, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Stock of Oxford, Ohio. Mrs. Lizzie Tolson is now visiting Mr. and Mrs. Chaney.

Local Girls To Compete At State Fair For Title Of Miss Kentucky

Miss Imogene Porter of Bruin, Elliott county, and Joyce Taulbee of Campton, will pack their bags in a few days and head for Louisville and the Kentucky State Fair, where they hope to capture the title of "Miss Kentucky Rural Electric Co-op of 1957."

Imogene will compete as Miss Grayson Rural Electric Co-op of 1957, the title she won this summer at the Annual Meeting and Electric Farm Show of the co-operative. Miss Taulbee will compete as Miss Licking Valley R.E.A.

Competing against them will be 20 beauties representing other rural electric cooperatives across the state.

The contest will be held Tuesday, September 10, at 3 p.m., Central Daylight Time, in front of the stadium. There is no charge for admission. Last year an estimated 8,000 people saw the contest.

Among the prizes going to the top finalist will be an expense-paid trip to Dallas early next year, where she will compete for the national title of "Miss Rural Electricification of 1957"; a 13-cubic-foot General Electric freezer; and a four-piece silver tea service.

An added feature for the winner: she will be crowned—and probably kissed—by singer Pat Boone.

General Electric Supply Company, Louisville, is sponsoring the contest.

Last year's state beauty queen, Miss Bunny Wells of Temple Hill, went on to win the national crown. This year she is the official hostess at the State Fair.

Judges of the contest will be Joe Creason, feature writer for the Courier Journal; John Koon, executive director of the Kentucky Farm Bureau; Mrs. Sam Guard, publisher; and Ken Meeker, advertising executive. A fifth judge is yet to be named.

21 contestants will arrive in Louisville the day before the contest. Activities will include training sessions with charm school representatives, meetings with beauty consultants, appearances on radio and television, conferences and a presentation dinner.

Isaac Shelby, First Governor
(By Charles F. Hinds, Secretary-Treasurer of the Kentucky Historical Society)

FRANKFORT, Ky., Sept. 2.—The portrait of Isaac Shelby, first governor of Kentucky, 1792-96, and again governor, 1812-16, hangs in the Governors' gallery in the Senate of the Old State House, along with paintings of all of Kentucky's Governors. Behind Shelby's portrait is that of his wife, Susanna Hart Shelby, daughter of Capt. Nathaniel Hart of Boonesboro. Both portraits were given to the Kentucky Historical Society in 1933 by Miss Susanna Hart Grigsby, a great granddaughter of Shelby.

Governor and Mrs. Shelby were painted by outstanding artists, the former by Matthew Jouett, the latter by P. Henry Davenport. The Kentucky legislature commissioned Edward C. Nock in 1830 to paint the portrait of Shelby which hangs on the east wall, flanked and opposed by the Governor's gallery.

Shelby was born in Maryland in 1750, and lived later in Virginia, North Carolina, and Kentucky. He was the son of Evan Shelby, prominent landowner, army officer, and statesman. One of Isaac's prized possessions, now owned by the Society, was his father's razor, first carried in the French and Indian War and used later by both father and son.

At 24, young Lt. Shelby served with gallantry in his father's company at Point Pleasant (1774). In the American Revolution, he is best remembered for leadership and heroism at King's Mountain (1780). He carried away a British rifle known as the "Brown Bess" as a souvenir. That rifle is now on display in the state museum.

From 1783 to 1792, Shelby played a prominent role in the Virginia district of Kentucky. In 1792, he helped frame Kentucky's first constitution and was elected first Governor.

After his first term, Shelby retired to "Traveler's Rest," south of Danville. In 1812 he was re-elected for his second term. The Society owns the peace pipe given to Shelby by the Chickasaws.

He died in 1826 and was buried at "Traveler's Rest," presently a state shrine. The Society has Shelby's gold watch, inscribed shortly before his death: "I Shelby, 12th Nov. 1824."
